

SIDNEY AUDITION

Jeremy Wasserstein's bar mitzvah was a very big night for me because it was the first time anyone ever called a slut. And then I was sitting on the floor of the bathroom. People were coming in and out. Nobody said anything to me. I mean I was literally on the floor. Probably crying. And then Bella walks in and just immediately she's sitting right there on the floor next to me. And she's going on a rant about how much she loves hanging out in the bathroom at bar mitzvahs because there's always free swag like sewing kits and nail polish remover and tampons, and she makes me laugh. And she asks me why I'm crying. I tell her it's because Mark Deckland asked me to dance and then tried to feel me up, and I kneed him in the dick and he told me--he said to me "if you're going to dress like a slut you can at least act like one." And Bella thought that I was like the shit, like you know how it is. You're not a woman until...and no one had ever said something like that to her. Even now, nobody has treated her like that. She said that to me the other day. That she's almost sixteen years old and no one has ever cat called her, and no one has ever kissed her. Like they're the same thing.
